EGYPT

M. El Abbadi, "Historians and the Papyri on the Finances of Egypt at the Arab Conquest," Proceedings of the XVI International Congress of Papyrology (Chicago, 1981), 509-15. The papyri show taxes assessed as so many carats (1/24 solidus) per aroura/feddan. The huge figures found in certain Arab texts for the revenue of early Muslim Egypt are probably the total carats, to be divided by 24 for the revenues in solidi/nomismae/dinars, yielding a figure, about 500,000 s., that concords with other evidence.
